Preface

The need for quick and accurate information is essential during a period of serious crisis, so coping effectively with a crisis demands thorough preparation and a well-thought-out communication strategy. The purpose of this guide is to supplement local efforts to develop communications preparedness and the response and recovery process for Caribbean Hotel and Tourism Association (CTA) members, national tourism organizations, and public and private sector industry stakeholders before, during and after a potential disaster. Strengthening local communications will also assist CHTA and its regional public-sector counterpart, the Caribbean Tourism Organization (CTO), with their support efforts for affected destinations and the region.

The 2018 guide was based on the experience of the 2017 hurricane season. Hurricanes Irma and Maria, which devastated several Caribbean destinations, caught many by surprise and highlighted the shortfalls in general preparedness across the region for such a natural disaster. Its purpose is a reminder to CHTA members and its stakeholders how to identify and strengthen their preparation and response systems, and ultimately, to manage crises of this scale, effectively by ensuring more accurate and timely communications, and speeding up the road to recovery.

New to this year's guide is the inclusion of a section on social media, since among the tools of communication, responsible use of social media can mitigate the effects of a crisis by positively influencing the actions of travelers and tourism stakeholders. Effective use of this modern communication tool is therefore essential in ensuring credibility and accuracy as well as the timely dissemination of information to media, the tourism industry and the public. Communication templates, talking points and press release guidelines have also been included.

This guide contains an update of many important points of contact which may be used in the event of an emergency. New contacts include Cartagena, Colombia as well as regional shipping and cargo contacts. The United Nations Regional Coordinators have also been included as key partners to be in contact with during disaster response and recovery. As changes occur, we ask to be notified via email at update@marketplaceexcellence.com. CHTA commits to updating this guide annually.

What do we mean by a crisis?

A crisis is a situation that overwhelms society's resources, threatens to upset systems of control, and could disrupt people's day-to-day lives. A typical crisis is an event that happens suddenly, involving many different players, calling for decisions under severe time constraints and conditions of uncertainty.

The crises for which we are preparing our membership are typically natural disasters, which are expected, given our geographic location. These may include a hurricane or storm, earthquake, volcanic eruption, tsunami, among other types of natural disasters. Other crises that have impacted the tourism industry include vector borne diseases outbreaks (Zika - 2016) and dangerous infectious disease outbreaks such as the 2009 pandemic flu.

While these are the most probable for our region, we should not discount political-economic crises, as terrorism (9-11) and the 2008 global financial crisis proved.

It is important to recognize and prepare for these unexpected, potentially hazardous events which require immediate attention. Such events are of great concern to the public, tourists and the media and so quick, decisive – and visible – reactions are critical to reassure the public that the matter is being handled.

Crisis communications

Crisis communications is the process, once a crisis has started, of minimizing its negative consequences for the organization and the stakeholder the organization is responsible for. It requires immediate decisions and countermeasures using all the communication tools at its disposal in order to influence and steer its development in a positive direction as possible.

Preparation protocols

Effective operations during a crisis demand advanced planning and preparation before. Crisis management is needed during preventative and preparatory phases and during the acute state and the recovery after the crisis. Efficient communication during any crisis depends on such comprehensive, preemptive measures. These measures include staff education with training, drills and exercises. It is also imperative that training involves the different communications technology resources. Maintaining a current and comprehensive database, with multiple alternative points of contact, is essential and this should be ready before the hurricane season.

Training should be ongoing so that staff are always ready to act at a moment's notice with a calm, measured demeanor. Crisis protocols should be established in an efficiently functioning network before the crisis hits.

Hotel and Tourism Emergency Response Teams

Locally, the national hotel and tourism association (NHTA), and the public-sector tourism entity (e.g. Ministry or Department of Tourism, Tourism Board, Tourism Authority etc.) should be part of any recognized crisis each island management and response entity (i.e. a National Emergency Management Agency - NEMA). Each destination should assemble Tourism Emergency Response Teams (TERT) marshalled by NHTAs and Tourism Boards or their equivalent, to build and support tourism's readiness and response capacities and manage the flow of information and appropriate communications between stakeholders. Some of the region's destinations already have a TERT in place, led by the Director of Tourism or their equivalent, and officially designated as part of the broader NEMA.

Such communications should include damage assessments of tourism-related facilities and public infrastructure, status of airports and seaports as well as operation of flights, accounting for guests, possible evacuation details, etc. In addition to the NHTA and its public-sector counterpart, the TERT should include representatives from the police, airport, airlines, cruise line industry, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Public Works or their equivalents.

The TERT would be responsible for crisis management for the tourism industry before, during and after the crisis. It should convene periodically (annually) to review and update plans and information. Its responsibilities include:

1. Defining roles, establishing procedures, and working with the official national crisis management agency to ensure a clear line of communication between the tourism sector with the broader national effort (in some destinations this relationship is formalized).
2. Establishing clear lines of communication, designating primary and secondary contact persons for each representative area, with alternative methods for communicating (i.e. home and work landline numbers, mobile phone numbers, overseas numbers, emails, Facebook and key social platform addresses, satellite telephones, and ham radios).
3. Gathering and maintaining a database of industry contacts, including hotels and accommodation providers, airlines, ground tour operators, cruise line representatives, destination and hotel public relations firms, foreign embassies and consulates, and major shipping companies.
4. Providing rapid-response decision-making and recommendations on issues and situations as they escalate.
5. Providing ongoing time-sensitive reports and assessments on the sector's damage, readiness and messaging to external travel partners and media, CHTA and CTO.
6. Designating primary and secondary points of contact to work with CHTA and CTO.
7. Identifying third-party spokespeople and industry allies who will speak on behalf of the associations.
8. Notifying key audiences when a crisis occurs and providing regular status updates to them.

The TERT should meet or teleconference at the onset of a crisis and/or as soon as a crisis has been identified - for example, several days before a likely Hurricane Watch.

Local Hotel and Tourism Association heads should be responsible for determining the appropriate time to convene TERT meetings and/or conference calls.

Once the position is evaluated, as the situation evolves, the TERT will develop positions/messages on issues and strategies for disseminating information to key stakeholders.

Practical Business Guidelines From CEDEMA

(The Caribbean Emergency Disaster Emergency Management (CEDEMA) guidelines for businesses on how to manage a hurricane)

Before a Hurricane***

1. Compile an Emergency Contact List with 24-hour telephone contact numbers of essential employees.
  - a. Identify vital records and make back-up copies/and or transfer them to microfilm. Identify a safe storage level area within the facility where records can be relocated, if necessary. This area should be above ground level and away from windows and exterior walls, which may leak. In a one-story facility, file cabinets and boxes may be placed on pallets up off the floor. Consider moving vital records off-site, particularly if the business is in a storm-surge vulnerable area.
2. Determine responsibility for maintaining the facility. Ensure that the following items are addressed:
  - a. Patch roofs and windows
  - b. Check security and flood lighting
  - c. Identify lightweight, loose items in outside storage areas that may be blown around in the wind
  - d. Identify emergency power requirements and determine if generator is available. If facility must be operational during a hurricane and a generator is not available, rent or purchase a generator. Test generator monthly during the hurricane season.
3. Determine if computer support will be available for primary/ critical computer users who need to remain operational during a hurricane
4. Verify that communications equipment is operational
5. Determine the type and amount of hurricane emergency supplies necessary. All hurricane emergency supplies should be clearly marked and stored in a secure area that is accessible in an emergency. Recommended supplies include:
  - a. A battery-operated radio or TV (test reception in building).
  - b. One flashlight per person working during the hurricane.
  - c. Extra batteries for both radio and flashlights.

- d. First-Aid kit
  - e. Emergency tool kit, if necessary
  - f. Food and water supplies for staff assigned to the facility during the hurricane. Be sure to include needed utensils.
6. Provide employees with hurricane preparedness information

Hurricane Watch

Hurricane conditions (sustained winds of 74 mph or higher) are possible within the specified area. A hurricane watch is issued 48 hours in advance of the anticipated onset of tropical-storm-force winds in an area

1. Secure all doors, windows, and other openings against wind and water
2. Tie down or bring indoors any objects which may be blown about by hurricane winds. Install hurricane shutters, cover windows with boards, or close drapes. If a room must be occupied during the hurricane and window protection is not available, windows may be crisscrossed with tape to slightly reduce flying glass.
3. Verify that vital records are in a safe storage area. Files, records, and storage cabinets may be wrapped in plastic for moisture protection. If necessary, temporarily relocate records to a safe storage facility off-site.
4. Confirm availability of necessary computer support
5. Ensure that all vehicles are serviced and fueled. Determine where they can be stored to safely weather the storm
6. Inventory hurricane emergency supplies and restock if necessary
7. Dismiss essential employees temporarily so they can secure their personal property before returning to duty

Hurricane Warning

Hurricane warnings indicate that hurricane conditions (sustained winds of 74 mph or higher) are expected somewhere within the specified area. Because hurricane preparedness activities become difficult once winds reach tropical storm force (sustained winds of 39 to 73 mph), the hurricane warning is issued 36 hours in advance of the anticipated onset of tropical-storm-force winds to allow for important preparation

1. Move desks, files, equipment and furniture away from un-shuttered windows. Papers, drawings, etc. should be placed inside files or desks. Wrap office equipment, such as copy machine and computers, in plastic to protect against water damage.
2. Dismiss all non-essential personnel.
3. Turn off all air conditioners, disconnect electrical equipment, turn off lights.

After the Hurricane***

1. Assess basic damages at work site including roof, water, damage and broken windows
2. Initiate clean-up of worksite
3. Do not turn on computer equipment if there are indications of low voltage power fluctuations, low air conditioning output, water under raised floor, broken windows or damaged equipment
4. Employees return to work according to staffing schedule.

* It is also important to take photos of your property before and after a hurricane. This helps when filing insurance claims.

Communicating During a Crisis

Crises are inevitable but when they strike, it is important to restore normality as soon as possible. To do so, following the right steps helps protect and even enhance the reputation of a brand and the people who constitute it.

The role of public information is critical and public information officers (PIOs) and public relations (PR) officers are front line staff for any department because they communicate the aims, mission and mandates of an organization.

A combined proactive and reactive approach is important – preemptively addressing issues before they become news stories and responding quickly to news and public enquiries.

Given the severity of recent storms, it is important to anchor communications offshore (especially in the event of an interruption of telecommunications networks), so that there are clear lines of communications to all audiences. Age-old tenets of communications during a crisis still hold: including telling the truth, speaking with one voice, centralizing communications so all spokespeople are speaking from the same unified message, committing to internal communications and remaining calm despite the circumstances.

When under attack, don't react emotionally. When you don't have the answer, tell the truth. Never lie. Offer to get back to the reporter with details.

Good PR practice demands anticipating questions and information requests.

Moreover, it is important to ensure the destination's messaging is consistent among both the public and private sectors.

Crisis management checklist

The following communications vehicles may be used to inform key audiences directly. It is essential that timely and accurate information be provided.

- ✓ News releases/advisory notices/bulletin updates
- ✓ Press conferences/media interviews
- ✓ Websites (local hotel/tourism associations, hotels, guest houses, villas). It is recommended that local hotel/tourism association websites be embedded on stakeholder sites. This way, updates/ information from the associations are directly shared to a wider catchment. The CHTA site can be shared as well.
- ✓ Social media platforms** - ensure that multiple, trained staff members have administrative access to these accounts. It is also recommended that an external party (off-island) have remote access as well, in the event that communication is interrupted.

- ✓ Team/group meetings
- ✓ Internal memos - ensure that all staff are kept abreast of what is happening on site
- ✓ Fact sheets
- ✓ Email
- ✓ Fax
- ✓ Satellite phones

Use of Social Media in a Crisis

1. Build an effective and social-friendly strategy

The crisis strategy should contain four key elements:

- Assess: Identify your organization's vulnerabilities and rank them in order of the fastest moving or most damaging threats to your brand. Prioritize plans to strengthen or respond to the largest vulnerabilities first.
- Prepare: Organize a crisis response team and select a spokesman. Draft statements with language that can address certain situations, but also matches your organization's brand voice. Identify which resources you'll use to monitor the crisis, such as social listening tools (for example, Google Alert).
- Train: Create and execute crisis simulations that involve your response team (or your entire workforce, as applicable and necessary). Also include media training exercises and ensure your spokespeople, executives and subject-matter experts are properly trained for interviews with reporters, press conferences and other media opportunities.
- Learn: Compile a list of important lessons from crises and use it to evaluate your crisis strategy. Take special note of areas where your team or organization could improve, and use that to adjust future crisis response materials, messages and overall strategy moving forward.

2. Integrate social media efforts into crisis communications

Communicators can take advantage of technology and social media to steer a situation's narrative and build or repair your organization's reputation, but social media efforts must be an integrated and integral part of their overall efforts. Your organization should also be current on social media changes and consistently build your skill set to handle new best practices.

3. Remember the foundations of crisis response

Crisis response assets include timelines that give readers an overview of the situation (including the events that led up to it, if necessary) and what you're doing to remedy the crisis.

Graphics and charts can enhance communication with audiences, fact sheets that highlight your organization's key messages along with helpful information, FAQs, and explanation of the organization plans to do, along with any next steps your audience should take.

Ensure that as many of your crisis response assets fit the channels (Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, LinkedIn and Snapchat) you must use to reach your target audiences and are tailored accordingly. The more social media friendly your materials are, the better chance they have of being spread online, helping you to stay ahead of the news cycle.

The best defensive public relations is promotional. Ongoing comprehensive campaigns enhance brand image and reputation ahead of a crisis.

Facebook Use

Facebook is one of the most commonly used social networks worldwide. Facebook not only offers the opportunity for tourism organizations to communicate, but also to listen.

It functions as a second website for that organization, but in most cases it is much faster for uploading new content.

In the case of crisis notices or communications, the speed at which you can send messages may be critical. The moment you post new content, it is likely that many of the people following your social network page will see that information.

As with other social networking sites it provides an opportunity for feedback allowing a better assessment and understanding of crisis views and needs.

Social Media Policy

Each organization should have a social media policy which is a code of conduct that provides guidelines for employees who post content online either as part of their job or personal brand.

A social media policy lowers the risk of legal issues and helps protect the brand. It should also include the steps to take in the event of an account hack.

Press Release Guidelines from the United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO)

A press release is still the most common vehicle for communicating news of a crisis to the travelling public. The release follows a generally established format that is designed to convey information to the media in a clear and concise manner and encourage journalists to develop stories with a specific storyline. The primary audience ultimately is the traveler who will read the story though many other audiences will be aware of its contents. There are two basic sets of press releases for use in a crisis. The purpose for each is slightly different.

The first is the press release issued during a crisis, particularly the first release, very early on. This release is designed to establish your organization's position and role in the crisis so you can maintain some level of control of the story. If you do not get out front early, others will define your role and image for you.

The second is the press release issued after a crisis has ended. This release provides you with an opportunity to frame your organization's agenda for the future. With the immediate pressure from the crisis abated, this release is a forum for discussing your mission and goals in the context of your corporate culture and the community in which you operate.

Generic press release format – during a crisis:

Step 1: Headline - Short, descriptive and compelling. One sentence or idea with upper case for all letters

Step 2: Provide contact information - Person, email, telephone, address

Step 3: FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Step 4: Indicate location and date of release

Step 5: First paragraph

- Key information about the crisis presented clearly and concisely in a highly compelling manner. Make it interesting or the journalist will stop here.
- Provide the basic answers to the questions:
  - What happened?
  - When did it happen?
  - Where did it happen?

– How did it happen?

Step 6: Second and third paragraphs

Introduce additional information and expand on the details of the crisis:

- Damage
- injuries and fatalities
- rescue and recovery efforts
- economic impact.

Step 7: Next paragraph Introduce quotes from credible sources in positions of authority from inside and outside of your organization:

- Quotes should be relevant to the key questions and issues of the crisis.
- Quotes may include one or more of your organization's key messages.

Step 8: Final paragraph Include factual information about your organization, its mission and activities.

Talking Points Guidelines from the United Nations World Tourism Organization (UNWTO)

They are the points that you want to convey to the public in all of your communications in order to position your organization in the most positive light.

As a general rule, there should be only a small number of key messages (fewer than five) and they should be repeated several times during a media briefing or interview.

The talking points are primarily for the use of the designated spokesperson so he or she stays “on message” but they should be shared with all who conceivably might find themselves in a situation where they are unable to avoid making a public statement related to the incident.

Guidelines for talking points: General facts on the incident (provide source)

- People killed and/or injured
- Damage to property
- Impact on community
- Containment of event
- Compassion for victims and families
- Steps being taken to provide assistance
- Do not imply guilt
- Key messages: Actions taken to mitigate negative effects of incident
- Operations – Activation of special services or procedures
- Physical – Changes in plant, equipment or product
- Organization – Changes in responsibilities, reporting and communications

Key message: Credibility of the organization

- Longevity
- Safety record
- Community involvement
- Employee programs and benefits
- Environmental actions

Key message: Economic impact and importance of tourism to community

- Employment
- Tax receipts
- Support of social and cultural activities and resources

Guidelines to Communicating with the Media

1. Avoid Antagonizing the Media - An abrupt tone can affect your future relationship
2. Avoid speculation - Do not release information that is not specific to your organization. Warn other agencies of impending calls if you indicate that they should be contacted
3. Respond - Always return calls. Failure to do will force the media to seek alternative sources which may not be truthful
4. Challenge false statements - Monitor media reports and correct inaccuracies before they can be repeated
5. Put the crisis into context - Use maps to describe that the crisis is contained to a limited area
6. Remember the victims - Be sensitive and do not blame others
7. Give credit to others - Individuals or agencies you may be working with
8. Be honest and transparent - Put emphasis on actions taken to address bad news

Customer Communications

The near- and long-term impact of a crisis on your organization will depend to a large extent on how you handle your current customers during the first few hours and days of the onset of the incident.

The likelihood of ongoing support is dependent upon a strategy that is based on the immediate availability of a database of current customer email addresses and mobile phone numbers for proactive communications. It will also rely on the immediate activation of a crisis website with relevant information and links to important resources.

The success of this strategy will be based on:

- Accessibility. A database of current customers and their email addresses and mobile phone numbers should be updated at least daily or real time for immediate use.

- Immediacy. A standby/holding statement addressed to customers should be prepared and available for almost immediate dissemination by email, text messaging and on the crisis website.
- Frequency. Subsequent messages should be sent out frequently, as often as daily or even several times a day during the initial stages of the crisis, in order to assure customers that they are important to you and are not being forgotten.
- Specificity. To the extent possible, subsequent messages after the initial standby/holding statement should provide specific information and recommendations for action by customers. If there is no new information or action, say so in the message.
- Clarity. Messages should be clear and concise. Brief is good during an emergency so long as there is real content and frequency.

Communication Templates (Hurricanes)

When a crisis occurs, it is critical that the organization affected set and control the initial message and the ongoing messaging process. You must establish the perception of credibility and authority from the very beginning. In today's communications environment where social media is almost instantaneous, there is no time for delay. Delay means others will set the message and take control. Everything after that will be responding rather than controlling and guiding the messaging process. In the past, 24 or even 48 hours after the onset of a crisis was adequate time to take charge of communications. Today that has been compressed to a few hours. Immediate action is required.

Caribbean Hotel and Tourism Association Cancellation Guidelines in Event of Hurricane

The Atlantic hurricane season is often mislabeled as the Caribbean hurricane season. Storms can affect the whole region, including the U.S. East Coast, gulf states, Caribbean as well as Mexico and Central America.

The likelihood of a hurricane directly affecting most areas of the Caribbean in any given year is rare, given the vast geography of the Caribbean basin.

The frequency of hurricanes varies greatly from year to year. The Caribbean stretches over a region of more than a million square miles. Therefore, what happens in one part of the Caribbean will often not influence other parts of the region. So not every hurricane will directly affect a visitor's travel plans.

Nevertheless, recognizing public concerns and apprehension about travel to the Caribbean during the hurricane season and the need to provide assurances to travelers and prospective travelers, the Caribbean Hotel and Tourism Association has established voluntary guidelines for the region's 32 hotel and tourism associations and its accommodations and attractions members. These guidelines are intended to provide minimum assurances.

Several Caribbean destinations, independent properties, hotel chains, and airlines exceed these assurances with established guidelines and policies for addressing travel cancellations, extended stays, early departures and rescheduling. In addition, airlines and many hotels offer travelers' insurance, either directly or through third-party booking services.

Caribbean Hotel and Tourism Association - Hurricane Cancellation Guidelines for NHTAs

Note:

A growing number of hotels and destinations have established hurricane cancellation policies to address traveler concerns. These are intended to boost consumer confidence in traveling to the region during periods of potential storm activity. CHTA has considered policies already in place by some destinations and hotels in developing recommended hurricane cancellation guidelines for National Hotel and Tourism Associations (NHTA) and hotels and tourism-related businesses throughout the Caribbean. These are recommended minimum guidelines. We recognize that businesses, associations, and destinations may opt to adopt policies which are more or less liberal than what is recommended.

Below you will find two statements. One is for our industry's internal use, providing detailed recommended guidelines and is intended for consideration by NHTAs and individual properties in the formulation or updating of their cancellation policy. The other is very general in nature, for dissemination to local, regional, and international media.

CHTA Hurricane Cancellation Guidelines for Internal Consideration in the Formulation of Company and/or Destination Policy and Guidelines

The likelihood of a hurricane directly affecting most areas of the Caribbean in any given year is rare, given the vast geography of the over one million square miles of the Caribbean basin. The frequency of hurricanes varies greatly from year to year. Therefore, what happens in one part of the Caribbean will often not affect other parts of the region. Not every hurricane may directly affect travel plans.

Nevertheless, recognizing public concerns and perceptions regarding travel to the Caribbean during the hurricane season and the need to provide assurances to travelers and prospective travelers, the Caribbean Hotel and Tourism Association has established voluntary guidelines for the region's 32 hotel and tourism associations and its accommodations and attractions members. These guidelines are intended to provide minimum assurances.

A number of Caribbean destinations, independent properties, hotel chains, and airlines exceed these assurances with established guidelines and policies for addressing travel cancellations, extended stays, early departures and rescheduling. In addition, airlines and many hotels offer travelers' insurance, either directly or through third-party booking services.

Recommended Guidelines:

- Policies or practices should consider travelers who would need to postpone or cancel their vacation or extend their stay in the event of an official hurricane warning being issued by the Government for the destination and/or the closure of an airport, flight cancellation, and property damage which may prevent travel on the scheduled dates. Additionally, special considerations should be given when a tropical storm warning or hurricane watch has been issued.
- A clearly formulated cancellation policy should be enacted when the destination's Government officially declares that a tropical storm warning, hurricane watch or hurricane warning is in effect and the storm is forecast to pass over or within 75 miles of the destination. These policies may vary depending whether a tropical storm warning, hurricane watch or hurricane warning are in effect.
- In the event that a hurricane warning is in place during scheduled travel dates or the destination/hotel is unable to accommodate a guest, consideration should be given to offering the traveler a choice of using deposits or payments toward a future stay at their property or an affiliated property. This offer should be valid for a defined period (Note: offers are typically provided for re-booking dates up to 90 days and as long as 360 days following the original travel date.)
- In the event that a guest is already staying at a hotel in a destination under a hurricane warning and needs to extend their stay beyond the original departure date due to the temporary closing of an airport or airline cancellations, it is recommended that CHTA member hotels agree to offer a room rate at or below the rate which is part of their existing arrangement.

- Should a guest choose to depart early from the hotel or destination due to a hurricane warning, it is recommended that the guest not be billed for unused nights or services.
- Guests who are unable to arrive due to a flight cancellation or airport closure should be able to arrive on a later date without penalty.
- Group bookings and third-party bookings (i.e. online travel agency, travel wholesaler and tour operator) will be handled in accordance with the policies of the third-party.

Although it is not mandatory that all hotels in the Caribbean adopt a Hurricane Cancellation Policy, properties are encouraged to do so. CHTA's Hurricane Cancellation Guidelines are designed to facilitate the comfort of guests as well as to protect the reputation of hotels and destinations in the Caribbean. Travelers are advised to consult with their hotel, airline, travel agency or tour operator on specific policies.

CHTA Hurricane Cancellation Guideline (for dissemination to local, regional, and international media)

Recognizing public concerns and perceptions regarding travel to the Caribbean during the hurricane season and the need to provide traveler assurances, a growing number of Caribbean destinations and hotels have adopted hurricane cancellation policies.

The likelihood of a hurricane directly affecting most areas of the Caribbean in any given year is rare, given the vast geography of the over one million square miles of the Caribbean basin. The frequency of hurricanes varies greatly from year to year. Therefore, what happens in one part of the Caribbean will often not influence other parts of the region. Not every hurricane may directly affect travel plans.

To encourage more destinations and hotels to provide these assurances to travelers and prospective travelers, the Caribbean Hotel and Tourism Association has established voluntary guidelines for the region's 32 hotel and tourism associations and its accommodations and attractions members. These guidelines are intended to provide recommended minimum assurances for addressing travel cancellations, extended stays, early departures and rescheduling should a destination be under imminent threat.

A number of Caribbean destinations, independent properties, hotel chains, and airlines exceed these assurances. In addition, airlines and many hotels offer travelers' insurance, either directly or through third-party booking services.

Although it is not mandatory that all hotels in the Caribbean adopt a Hurricane Cancellation Policy, properties that are members of CHTA are encouraged to do so. CHTA's Hurricane Cancellation Guidelines are designed to facilitate the comfort of guests as well as to protect the reputation of hotels and destinations in the Caribbean. Travelers are advised to consult with their hotel, airline, travel agency or tour operator on specific policies.

Guidelines for the provision of support for immediate relief and long-term recovery by donors

It is important to be prepared and organized with outlets for offers of support to ensure donations are maximized and efficient, as well as to prevent fraud and alleviate confusion. Destinations should establish relationships with reputable aid agencies that will be recommended following a disaster and be able to connect them to concerned parties in a unified way. Legitimate aid agencies will be able to define tax exemption status for applicable donors. It is important to remember agencies' ability to accept donations in various currencies and electronically.

Monetary donations are generally agreed to be the best way to provide support in a crisis: professional relief agencies and registered charities on the ground are in the best position to know what supplies are needed and can convert monetary donations into culturally, nutritionally, and environmentally acceptable support. Monetary donations are far more easily transported than donated goods, which can cost more to transport than the value of the goods. Aid agencies are often able to negotiate discounts on needed items, making a donated dollar more valuable. Encouraging long-term relief through automatic recurring contributions also helps to sustain the recovery.

In terms of donated goods, creating a list of needed items is essential to avoid waste and clogging supply chains with stockpiled and inappropriate materials. Additionally, clearly defined procedures should be spelled out ahead of a disaster to relief agencies such as customs clearance for relief supplies. While policies will vary by destination, consideration should be given to defining clear communication between government agencies, having a separate designated area for clearing relief consignments, extended days and hours for customs clearance during a crisis and a process for designation of priority goods.
